Summertime!

Welcome to the July edition...

If you're keen to get out and about, have a look on page 6 for some ideas. And if you fancy a local music festival then don't forget to book your tickets to Solihull's Summer Fest this September. You won't want to miss seeing the likes of Olly Murs and Marti Pellow!

If you're feeling lucky, see our competition on page 39 as you could win 4 tickets to see The Jungle Book film at the Core Theatre in Solihull next month.

As many of us won't be jetting abroad this Summer it's a great opportunity to explore your local area more and try new places. Here's hoping the weather stays good for us all so we can make the most of Summer 2021.

Real Men Wear Sunscreen

And hats and sunspecs...oh yes they do.

Is there anyone who doesn't know that sunbathing with too little skin protection is dangerous? As well as being painful sunburn can be a prelude to skin cancer later in life. Unfortunately, it seems that men are complacent about sun protection, and die from skin cancer at almost twice the rate of women.

Sunburn is the damage caused to skin by ultraviolet (UV) radiation from the sun. Sadly for Brits, UV rays are not blocked by cloud cover so we should always use a sunscreen, even in the absence of blue skies. And the sun's rays are strongest between 11am and 3pm, so use this time to take a break in the shade.

Sunburn is not just a holiday problem. Most of us burn when we're not really aware of being exposed to the sun: a children's sports day; gardening or walking the dog are all potential sunburn situations.

Australians had a fabulous campaign to counteract the effects of the strong Antipodean sun. Their catchphrase: "Slip, Slop, Slap ", reminds them to slip on a shirt, slop on sunscreen and slap on a hat. But this year they ran a Sun Smart campaign aimed primarily at men, who often fail to realise the value of sunscreen. Skin cancer can be lethal, but it's also largely preventable, and most skin cancers can be avoided by using good sun protection.

This year, thanks to COVID-19 we are socialising outdoors more so it's critical we protect our skin.

The Australian campaign features a dad protecting all the household items he cares about such as the car, decking and the barbeque from the effects of harmful UV. His young son then points out the irony that he's forgotten to protect his own skin. The takeaway message is, if you cover something it lasts longer. That applies to your possessions but more importantly it applies to your skin – at any age.

If you know you are going to be exposed to the sun for several hours, wear a wide-brimmed hat, loose long-sleeved shirt, and long trousers. Baseball caps may be the hat of choice for British men but they don't provide the necessary protection for the delicate skin on the back of the neck. Choose a 'Foreign Legion' style hat instead with cloth that hangs down at the back, or a wide-brimmed Panama. Don't forget close-fitting wrap-around sunspecs to protect your eyes. Look for sunglasses stamped with BS EN ISO 12312-1 for general use, and BS ISO 12312-3 if you participate regularly in outdoor activities such as running or cycling etc.

Poor application of sunscreen is a common way to get sunburnt. Areas often overlooked are inside the top of the arms, tops of the ears and at the edges of clothes and swimwear. Apply sunscreen generously and reapply regularly, especially after swimming or exercise. Take extra care with balding heads where the skin is extremely delicate. Use a total sun block or a hat.

Remember, some medicines, including some antibiotics and anti-depressants, can increase the skin's sensitivity to sunburn. Ask your GP for information if you are concerned.

Open Water Swimming

Seven reasons to start

It's freeing - With no restrictive lanes, you swim in your own space and at your own pace without worrying about being caught, lapped, or kicked. Also...the scenery actually changes!

It's social - open water swimming groups are generally friendly and non-competitive.

It's exhilarating - Swimming in nature is relaxing but stimulating.

It's physically and mentally challenging

- Acclimatising to the cold temperatures of the open water pushes you physically and mentally! You need to build up your stamina and train your body's cold response. Wetsuits are not only allowed but recommended for beginners because they help keep you warm and improve buoyancy.

Your energy levels will increase -

Cold water excites nerves and speeds your heart rate. It's a natural high!

It's good if you're trying to lose weight

- Although most open water swimmers are not doing it to lose weight, swimming in cold water requires your body to use more energy to keep you warm. So, you'll burn fat more efficiently and increase your metabolism, and this will lead to weight loss as part of a calorie-controlled diet.

It's good for pain management

- Cold water immersion is used among athletes to help with injury and muscle pain. Swimming in cold water helps to minimise pain caused by inflammation. It seems to be particularly good for chronic pain.

An Open and Shut Case

Could a new garage door increase the kerb appeal of your home?

What does your garage door say about your home? Never thought about it? Perhaps you should. As the housing market picks up and people begin to think about upgrading or downsizing the right garage door can significantly increase the kerb appeal and even the price of your house.

There are two types of garage door: tilt-up and roll-up.

Tilt-up garage doors consist of a single panel of material. The door has to be pulled out and then pivoted up so it can slide along the roof of the garage. Roll-up garage doors, on the other hand, are made of a number of horizontal sections which are hinged together for flexibility. Because it rests on rollers, it can be lifted, and rolled into place along the roof of the garage.

Sectional roll-up doors are more expensive as a rule but have certain advantages. Since these doors don't have to be pulled outwards they are a great option if space on your drive is tight. They also take up less room in the garage since they can be placed higher than a tilt-up door.

Both types of doors are usually made from wood or steel. Wood is generally cheaper, and some people prefer the look. However, just like wooden patio furniture, a wooden door is more easily damaged by the weather and may warp, split, or blister.

Steel is more expensive. It isn't prone to warping but does need to be properly treated to prevent rust.

Garage doors are also available in aluminium or fibreglass. Both of these materials are less expensive than steel or wood, but neither is as strong, and they are more prone to damage with normal wear and tear.

Remember a garage door will be exposed to everything the weather can throw at it day in and day out, so will need regular maintenance.

Doors should be washed down regularly. Wooden garage doors need to be repainted in alternate years to ensure that the wood stays protected. Steel doors can be painted and treated to an occasional shine with car wax. All moving parts should be lubricated with motor oil whenever the door starts to feel stuck.

Consider...

Remote control - For ease, convenience and even safety you can't beat a remote-controlled door.

Override - Make sure the remote can be manually overridden in case of power failure. You don't want the kids, or the dog trapped in there, or even yourself.

Security - Automatic door locking mechanisms are useful.

Safety – This one is my top priority. To ensure that an electric garage door is deemed safe for use, it will have to incorporate at least one sufficient safety feature into its mechanism which will prevent personal injury. Every year children and adults are injured in accidents which involve older style garage doors. New doors should have an automatic reverse function. That way, if the door encounters any object as it is closing it will immediately stop and back-up.

Sounds of Summer

2020 deprived us of concerts and festivals, so get that summer vibe on.

2021 will be the year of the outdoor concert. With masking and social distancing still in place at time of writing many people may still not feel safe to attend indoor venues. But whether your tastes extend to the classics, jazz, pop, or folk there will definitely be an outdoor event to suit your family this summer.

Most outdoor concerts tend to take place in large fields so there's plenty of room for running around and even outdoor games such as frisbees and football, providing they're played well away from the main crowd. These are mostly family affairs and providing children are versed in general good manners, and they're not throwing food or punches, even young children can enjoy them.

Evening concerts are even more special as the day fades and people light candles and lanterns. It can be magical... and we need a bit of magic this year.

If you have young children consider sitting further back to allow more room to stretch out and wander around.

Take small amounts of lots of different foods. Everyone loves nibbles.

Take folding chairs, sunscreen, hats, insect repellent or those citronella candles and lots of rugs. Comfort is important, especially as the sun disappears.

A flask of hot chocolate will keep everyone happy as the evening air takes on a chill.

Some glowsticks or lanterns will make the event extra special.

From Here to Maternity

by Sinead Moriarty

Motherhood is never easy. Your life and priorities change suddenly and dramatically. But when being a new mother coincides with pregnancy it throws everything up in the air! Emma and James have been trying for a few years to get pregnant and with several failed IVF attempts they decide to pursue adoption instead. As the novel starts they are about to board a plane to Russia where they are adopting 10-month-old Yuri, along with a tatty cuddly elephant. However, Emma is in for a shock when she discovers that she is pregnant. In 9 months' time she will have two under 2s! Adjusting to life with Yuri is certainly not easy. The book was published in 2006 and there are many familiar moments for anyone who started a family in the 'noughties' as Emma turns to all the available parenting books to help her. To make matters worse for Emma she is dealing with a mother who always speaks her mind. Family life is never easy, but it has its moments and is something Emma would never change.

We Wear Underpants

by Katie Abey

There are many different styles of books for young children, and I know that when mine were both toddlers, one sort of book that was guaranteed to occupy them every time was a spotting book. We Wear Underpants is this type of book, and the illustrations are wonderful. Each page is full of animals wearing ... well, the sorts of things that you would NOT expect an animal to wear! From the titular item of underpants to t-shirts, scarves, wellies, and pyjamas. Each page asks the reader to look for a different thing. Counting candy floss on a page with animals wearing t-shirts at the fair. Finding the stripy scarf and deciding which scarf you would want to wear. And who is dreaming while wearing pyjamas. The final page asks, 'What will you wear today?'

A lovely way to get young children thinking about getting dressed – a task that often seems to be low on the list of priorities for a child that age!

Why not invest in a new driveway or patio to enhance the appearance and add value to your property?

The Best-Kept Secret Of The British Isles

Could Jersey be the best-kept secret that you haven't explored yet?

At only 9 miles by 5, it may seem small but the island packs a huge punch! Slightly closer to France, than it is England, Jersey is a perfect blend of the British etiquette we love so much mixed with a bit of exotic flair you didn't know you were even missing.

Think hidden valleys, flower meadows and stunning rugged cliffs accompanied by miles of blissful golden sands. It's a little slice of paradise that is a lot closer to home.

Top Things To Do

- Explore the landscape; lace up and step out to explore Jersey's beaches, cliffs, field and dunes
- Relax and unwind; the ideal place to rejuvenate, choose from luxury spa and wellness breaks
- Tuck into the Big Four; Dine on Jersey's Royals, oysters, lobsters, and dairy delights from the Jersey Cow
- Follow the Gin Trail; Hunt out St. Helier's speakeasy-style retreats on the Jersey Gin Trail

- Take a RIB trip; perfect for those adrenaline-junkies, enjoy incredible scenery and the chance to stop dolphins
- Go foraging; go wild and set out with a guide at low tide to find oysters and seaweed for your supper

Get Active

Jersey is the ultimate adventure playground, you can arrive within an hour and quite literally, hit the ground running.

From grandparents to grandkids, the whole family can enjoy some of Jersey's most exhilarating activities.

To catch a wave, head to St.Ouen's Bay where the Gulf Stream warms the waters, plus its powered by the Atlantic to create the island's surfer Mecca. From newbies to pro, you'll find friendly surf schools.

If you're seeking adrenaline, you need to try blokarting; think go-karting meets sailing! Or why not head to Mont Orgueil Castle for abseiling, or even ziplining, kayaking or coaststeering.

If your soul needs rebalancing, take a yoga season on the beach or even on a stand-up paddleboard!

Appley Ever After!

A brief history of cider...and a cider cocktail.

Apple trees have been cultivated since around the 5th century AD and cider, or something similar, seems to have been around for almost as long, although sometimes it was known as apple wine.

It was brought to Britain by the Normans in around 1100 AD. Cider was originally a drink for the poor. Ale was made from malted barley and using grain for alcohol could mean going without bread.

It was drunk instead of water because water at that time was often not safe to drink.

The first settlers in America planted lots of apple trees simply so they could continue to make cider to drink.

Originally it was made by crushing apples in a trough, until John Worlidge produced a special apple-mill in 1676.

While a simple cider over ice is hard to beat, a cider sangria can take the drink to another level. Colourful, cold, fresh and fruity, it's perfect for sharing with friends on a summer evening.

Pour a bottle of dry white wine into a large jug – Pinot Grigio is perfect. Add 250ml lemonade, 125ml lime juice, a large handful of mint, and plenty of sliced strawberries, and orange and lime slices.

Chill out for at least 15 minutes so the fruit infuses the drink and vice versa. Just before serving, add loads of ice and two bottles of your favourite cider.

Save water

In spite of the somewhat soggy spring water is an increasingly precious resource in the UK. Over the past few decades, rivers, reservoirs, and ground water supplies have become depleted. It's important to save water where we can.

Most of us have enough space for at least one water butt, and there are slimline versions for smaller plots. Connect them to every available downpipe around your house! Fit guttering to sheds and summer houses to allow even more water collection. Keep the butts covered to prevent leaves falling in and deter mosquitos from breeding.

Bulk up soil with organic matter, such as compost and leaf mould. This improves free-draining soil particularly, but most soil types will benefit. It prevents clay soil baking hard and damaging roots, and on boggy soil it improves drainage and oxygenation. It's win-win, whatever soil you garden on.

Water during cooler parts of the day. A good soak every few days is better than little and often, because when only the surface is wet most of the water evaporates or drains away. Also, water only at critical stages like germination, or when you've just transplanted young plants with immature root systems, or when fruit is setting such as tomatoes or strawberries.

Bare soil loses moisture quickly through evaporation so mulch, mulch, mulch. Use straw, grass clippings or leaf mould. Mulching has the added benefit of smothering weeds.

A green lawn looks lush, but no-one should be watering a lawn nowadays. Yes it will yellow, but lawns are tough and will green up at the first sign of rain.

I retired my sprinkler system years ago. Sprinklers are wasteful and it's better to implement targeted watering or even a slow drip-irrigation system. Work with your garden rather than against it. My free-draining lime soil favours plants such as lavenders and other silver-leaved species. If you garden on clay you might choose roses or ribes sanguineum and Malus (crab apples).

Greenhouses can be a major source of water wastage. Never place pots directly on to staging. Instead use capillary matting or trays to capture run-off and enable plants to access this when needed.

The only time you shouldn't use rainwater is with seedlings. They are vulnerable a variety of fungal infections called which fall under the catchall phrase, 'damping off disease'. Tap water only is recommended for seedlings. But once they are potted up, you can switch to harvested rainwater.

'Grey' water is water from washing up or washing vegetables, or even bathwater. Collecting it can be a good idea providing you take certain precautions. There are plenty of tutorials on YouTube to help you make the most of your own grey water. Use rinsing water only or eco products free from phosphates which are harmful to the microflora in the soil. Bathwater should not be stored for too long and should only be used to water flowers, never edible crops, because of the risk of bacterial growth harmful to humans if ingested.

I hope this has inspired you to save water in your garden this summer.

The Cannes Film Festival

Tue, 6 Jul 2021 – Sat, 17 Jul 2021

The world's first ever competitive international film festival was held in Venice in 1932. Initially the festival and its awards was about the national prestige of the participating countries as much as it was about the films.

As World War II approached people noticed that the Venice film awards began to favour countries of the fascist alliance, most notably Germany and Italy.

In 1939 France was a certainty for The Festival's top prize - with Jean Renoir's La Grande Illusion. But instead it was awarded jointly to the German film Olympia and the Italian film Luciano Serra, Pilota.

The French were furious and with good reason. Olympia was produced in association with Joseph Goebbels' Ministry of Propaganda and the Italian entry was made by Mussolini's son!

The French withdrew from the competition. The British and American judges resigned citing their anger at the way political dogma and ideology were interfering with artistic appreciation.

Later that year a group of critics and film makers petitioned the French government to hold an alternative international film festival in France. This festival would promote artistic independence so films could be shown without fear of political repression.

Initially the French government were reticent as they had no wish to offend Mussolini but the group - which included the co-founder of cinema, Louis Lumière - were persuasive and the idea was eventually approved.

Several locations were considered. Officially Cannes won because of its, 'sunny and enchanting location,' but it's widely acknowledged that the real reason was because the City of Cannes agreed to fund a dedicated venue for the festival. And there - interrupted only by World War II, and more recently the pandemic of 2020 - it remains.

Today the festival continues to uphold the highest artistic standards. In an industry dominated by 'the bottom line' Cannes stays true to its roots.

At the time of writing cinemas are opening their doors again so why not enter into the Cannes spirit and head to your local movie house? Even better pick a film that's a bit different to your usual choice? You might be pleasantly surprised.

And if you can't get to the cinema yet, try renting one of these previous Palme D'Or (the top prize) winners, don your finery, buy in popcorn and champagne, and create a little bit of Cannes in your sitting room.
